PIONEER WASHER.
E. G. BOLTER,
AGENT FOR OREGON AND WASHINGTON TERRITORY

THIS CELEBRATED WASHING MACHINE IS now for the first time introduced to the Oregon public It is unrivalled for its simplicity durability and the rapidity and ease of its action Washing the dirtiest clothes perfectly clean in from five to ten minutes, with but slight labor, and lasting with proper care, for ten years The wear and tear of clothing in washing by this machine is vastly less than by any other known process of washing It does its work by a reverse motion in forcing the water through the clothes
It having a tight cover the steam thus assists materially in cleansing the clothes, and also avoids the inhaling of steam from hot suds
This Machine captured the Special Premium at the California State Fair, and all that have used it pronounce it an invaluable adjunct to old housekeepers and families and washing men and washing women
It has been extensively introduced throughout the State of California, and receives the universal commendation of all who have used it.
THE COUNTY RIGHTS, now unsold, will be sold at a bargain if applied for soon

FROM PUGET SOUND

OLYMPIA, W T, Sept 8th, 1867.

The great topic among the people here for a week past has been spiritualism Rev Benj Todd has been giving a series of lectures on that subject, which have been attended by a large share of the community, and created an interest hardly to be expected considering the large orthodox element here Considerable opposition has been made against allowing him to speak, as well as against his opinions, but without much effect Some of his philosophy made an innovation upon old style theology, and if it does no good by setting people to thinking and acting better, old Gabriel had better not come this way or he will lose his horn.

Dr J P. Bryant, the physician who cures by the "laying on of hands," has been here a few days, and had his "hands" full. Several cases of long standing have received help, and what over he the powers used, it does not refute what he has done. The people here are amazed at it. Mr. Todd and Dr. Bryant both leave for Portland to morrow.

The annual gathering of the Grand Lodge of Masons of Washington Territory commenced their sittings on the 18th instant, in this place.

The weather has been unusually warm for several weeks until the last two days Since then it is quite cool and autumn like, with one or two showers of rain The hot season has melted the snows from the mountains more than is often seen, the western side of Mt Rainier appearing comparatively bare

The farmers have been very busy harvesting, lately The crops are of an average quality Fruits of all kinds are in abundance

A little bit of sharp practice was attempted to be played upon a certain telegraph company not a thousand miles from Olympia, a short time ago Being in want of a new telegraph pole, a good "brother" was engaged to get one Going out a couple of miles on the line, he found an extra one which the company had bought two years before After hewing it over, he brought it in, and when he delivered it the operator said, "I will accept it, but I shall sue you for stealing one of the company's poles" The young man has not called for his pay yet

The enthusiasm for the N P R R has some what subsided, now that the financial agent, Walker, has gone into the mountains Nothing further has been heard from the party on the "Packwood" pass Packwood says it is practicable, and of course no sensible engineer will dispute his word about anything in the mountains The party on the Snoqualmie pass have crossed to the other side, and were at Lake Kitchens on the 25th ult They found the pass to be 3,150 feet in hight, and requiring a grade of 600 feet on the last two miles Thus takes a good deal of the romance out of that pass, for of late it seemed to be lowering in hight, if we believed the statements of those who were interested in roads over it, so that the only difficulty in constructing a railroad appeared to be in building a sufficient dike to keep the tide water from flowing through? The surveying party will run a line down the Yakima and return by the Cedar River Pass. Messrs A. A Denny and C. Clymer have gone to explore a route through the Snoqualmie to the Columbia.

A small steam propellor, sixty two feet in length, was launched at Snohomish City last week She is taking her machinery at Freeport, is called the Ruby, and is intended to run regular between Seattle and Port Townsend.

The little steamer Chehalis arrived safely at Gray's Harbor and is running on the river

Schlesinger, who was arrested at Port Angeles for forgery at Victoria, was committed by Judge Darwin at Port Townsend. Governor Seymour having issued a requisition for him, Governor Moore has ordered him to be given up to the British authorities

Several cases in the District Court at Port Townsend, last week, were transferred to this district on account of prejudice of the Judge There was but little business transacted in the court.

Gen. McKinny, Superintendent of Indian Affairs, returned last Thursday from San Francisco, where he has been in search of Indian Department goods. A large amount of supplies were purchased in New York last year by a Government agent and forwarded to San Francisco, where they have been in storage since, there not being moneys to pay the freight—this freight amounting to more than the same goods could be bought for to day in that city. They are an unsuitable stock for the purpose for which they are intended, as all such purchases are, and are simply forced on the Department by fraudulent transactions at home The Superintendent has purchased a small supply of other articles, and it is hoped with better success than it has been heretofore.

The lawyers have the care of Mrs Spining, of the Insane Asylum, in their hands, and will soon bring it before the courts

The "Darwin divorce case" of Wilson vs Wilson, will be heard at Port Townsend on the 17th inst, before Judge Wyche A few days ago, several depositions were taken before a competent officer in this place to go before the court, which elicited little crumbs of moral pabulum, entirely unexpected, and suggestive of a few good things. One witness has heretofore stood high in society, a man of excellent business qualities, a member of an orthodox church and withal a prominent stumbout man, and this gentleman's evidence was supposed would demolish that of all opposite Unfortunately for his friends, perhaps, it produced something very different, and proved that we have had a sort of free luvism existing among us. Upon being questioned, the gentleman freely admitted that he was very familiar with the lady in the case, kissing and hugging her as opportunity offered, but upon being further questioned, declared that it was nothing more than his usual courtesies to all the fair sex who travel with him! The other evidence is unimportant, after such a wholesale impeachment of the characters of the ladies of Puget Sound! This witness is a nice little man, polite and agreeable and particularly fond of the fair sex, and probably the particular point of the case is to know where his agreeableness end and something else begins Most men will think that politeness is exceeded when the good little man hugs and kisses their wives, but he may not Then the idea that one man has such a monopoly of business! It cannot be countenanced for a minute He might have kissed and hugged the lady in the suit to his heart's content, or kissed and flattered some old maid behind the cabin door, but that he should so treat all ladies who travel on a certain boat (nameless here for even mine), and then tell it, is too much for poor humanity to stand No wonder they turn the tables on him and call bad little names! Who wouldn't? He ought to be read out of society and church at least, for "blowing" "Our Own Correspondent" of the S I Bulletin was present at the examination A lively description may be expected in his next communication Also, the wealthy gentleman of the $30,000 breach of promise case of last summer I mention him particularly, as he disowns that his affianced should travel on the boat in which the witness was interested

AN OLD CRIMP.—In 1861 a band of rebel cut the rails fired the Platte River bridge, with the expectation that a train of Union soldiers would be along and be precipitated into the stream below Instead of a train filled with soldiers, the regular passenger train was the first to pass, and plunged into the bed of the stream and twelve persons were killed and many wounded Positive information relative to the identity of the murderers could not be obtained at the time, but a few days since twelve men were arrested on a charge of complicity in the crime, and the authorities have the names of about thirty others who were in some manner guilty The St Louis Democrat, from which we condense the foregoing, says of the burning of the bridge "The act was one worthy of the fiendish spirit of the rebellion It was of a piece with the burning of crowded steamers, and the firing of hotels thronged with women and children It is one of those deeds that men do not soon forget nor forgive, and of the rebels have any ground for calling loyal men vindictive or unforgiving, they must remember that just such deeds as this began the war, and blackened almost every page in its history They have themselves to thank if outraged humanity refuses to intercede in their behalf. If the perpetrators of this deed can be surely identified and fairly proved guilty, we hope they may be punished without mercy."

FRIDAY MORNING, SEPT. 13, 1867.

Organization.

A movement is commencing among the Unionists of California in favor of Gen. Grant for the Presidency. Their county Convention at San Francisco has passed a resolution declaring for him, and recommendations are made that Clubs be organized in all parts of the State to endorse him as their nominee. That Grant has great strength among the people is perfectly clear. From the tone of the press it is evident that large numbers are looking to him as a candidate. Other names are mentioned in connection with the nomination, but Grant appears to stand before them all. The name of Stanton is the only one which has a hold on popular favor at all comparable with that of Grant; at least such is the appearance which the political horizon now wears. As it will be only a few months till the Convention is held and the candidates placed before the people, the agitation of the subject henceforward, through the press and among the people, can hardly be thought premature. No doubt the immediate occasion of this action in California is the late defeat. It is the initial step to the better organization and consolidation of the party in that State. The party can unite on Grant, and if united, it cannot fail to carry the State in 1868. Grant, if nominated, would get four-fifths of the votes in the Electoral College of the Union. But we by no means believe he is the only candidate with whom the loyal masses would be assured of success. Nor do we say that he is the only man to whom they should look forward as a standard bearer in the coming contest. There are many excellent and able men who are thoroughly identified with the party and who have been so identified through the whole period of its struggle, from whom a choice could be made. While therefore we would not suggest the formation in this State of "Grant Clubs" only after the manner proposed in California, we would urge upon Unionists or Republicans throughout the State the need of organization through organization is everything. Both a State and National election are but a little distance before us, and it is not too early to begin making preparations for them.

At the meeting of the Council on Wednesday evening, the sum of $71 50 was paid the city organ for advertising. At the previous meeting its bill was $182 50. For some time to come it will receive from $60 to $100 per week. The greater part of this advertising is needless, and nothing like it was ever done before. The Democrats having got in over by false pretenses are simply swindling the people to pay for the support of their party organ. Nobody pretends that the publication of a large part of this matter is of any advantage to the public. It has never been done before and nobody suffered any inconvenience thereby. The only object in it now is to fill the spoils for partisans. Yet these plunderers who have entered into a systematic scheme for a division of spoils among themselves (a part of which scheme has been foiled by the Council) have daily spit fire at their opponents as "corruptionists." This is not the first time that a thief has known to point to the hue and cry. It is a well known fact to all citizens that Portland never had a Council so thoroughly imbued with partisanship, so utterly arbitrary and insolent in its actions as the present majority of the body. Their general action for the past year has been without a parallel.

If Dow had been in Portland managing the Democratic organ, he would not have apologized for the violent speech Cantrell delivered the other night, nor snubbed the author for blurting out the real sentiments of the Democracy. Dow would have called the speech an able exposition of Democratic principles. He would every other Democratic editor in the State except "Ephraim Jewett." And he would have done it had he been smart enough to give utterance to his real views. But everybody, including the person himself, knows very well that nine-tenths of the Democratic party would endorse Cantrell's sentiments, however violent or vindictive, were it not for the so-called Radicals. The spirit of revenge is earnest enough, but sometimes it is overruled by policy, fear or wholesome discretion.

We don't know but we shall be compelled to review that lively story entitled "Not much of a Shower," at least in time for the Herald, just as we intended for the benefit the story about Major Wm. The editor of that paper has a few old stories which he tells over and over with as much gusto as if he were crammed "with wise saws and modern instances," and believed himself possessing the rarest wisdom. The story of the individual who thought there would not be "much of a shower" is one them, and we would relate it for the anecdotical editor,—notwithstanding it is "trumbling musty" as Hamlet says,—if we could get that by so doing he could be induced to quit it and communicate his wisdom by giving us something new.

Our Coos Bay poet, of whose former work we made mention in out with another "Offering" which in style and matter to his former one. We fear he will ride his Pegasus to death. It is already run for him to gallop the poor nag up and down the heights of Parnassus in this style. We are told that he has on hand a lot of unpublished "poetry" of the same sort with that of which we have published specimens, and that his Muse, or Muses,—for lyric poetry is the sort he mostly cultivates,—is inspiring him with song at the average rate of one or two quires per week. No doubt he will continue to publish, under the impression that,

> 'Tis pleasant, sure, to see one's name in print,
> A book's a book, although there's nothing in't.

The Lafayette Courier says that "honest Iago" is the person who "stole the livery of the court of heaven to serve the devil in." That may be, but Shakespeare does not mention it. The quotation is from Pollok's "Course of Time," and is found somewhere about the middle of that very long and vigorous, though "jerky" and unpolished poem. It is used as descriptive of the false minister who put on the sacred robes that he might in this disguise "transact villainies that common sinners dared not meddle with."

General Sheridan says, incidentally, in one of his communications to the Government, that in the interior parishes of Louisiana, in proportion to ten members, more blacks than whites write their own names in registering.

ERROR.—By a mistake of the compositor we were made to say yesterday that Higby's majority in the Second California District, as far as heard from, was "1,717." It should have been 717.

Tour through the Boise Mines.

[From the Idaho World.]

In Wednesday's issue we told of our visit last Saturday to the Pioneer mill and ledge on Granite creek. Near there are the tunnels which have been sunk into the Gold Hill ledge, and an extension of it across the creek, and also of two other ledges, but work for the present seems to have been suspended on all of them. Far above the Gold Hill tunnel, almost at the brow of the high hill, is the "Growl and Go" ledge, recently developed, and which has paid so wondrously rich. The ledge has been stripped by the several parties now in possession an aggregate length of 700 feet, and in some places they have pierced into the ledge from ten to thirty feet. In each and every place the average yield, by the ordinary process of panning, has been fully fifty dollars per day to the hand. We learn that the title to the ledge is in controversy—the owners of the Gold Hill ledge claiming it as their own. At present the parties in possession are doing very little work upon the ledge.

GRANITE CREEK.

On returning from the Pioneer Mill, we stopped an hour or so at the active and very prosperous camp of Granite Creek, which presents at this time more enterprise in the way of building than any other camp in the Basin. We hope that the business and growth of the place may adequately sustain all this present show of enterprise. Besides the pioneer store of Mr. P. K. Walsh, the Danskin Bros. of Pioneer City have lately established another, and we learned, still another will be opened there. J. J. Kelly and John Dougherty, lately of this city, have a saloon in the largest building in the camp, and started also in the livery stable business; and Thos. Holbrook is putting up a very large building for a public house. There are three or four other frame buildings, for shops or some kind of business, going up at the lower end of the camp. Granite Creek diggings are certainly among the best, if not the very best, in this Basin. They are extensive, and will give full scope for steady, very profitable labor for many years, but the claims are nearly all owned by companies, and few of the owners are disposed to sell, except it be, as in a few past instances, where they have "made their pile," and desired to leave the country for their old homes. The principal claim owners are John Ellis & Co., Leary & Co., Brainard & Co., Wm. Lynch, and a Portuguese Company to whom Mr. Brainard lately sold one of his creek claims, which he had worked for some time, for $8,000, and which still pays very richly. Water is quite plentifully supplied to all the diggings by Lynch's and other ditches, and the creek claims are always amply furnished with it. An immense aggregate amount of gold has been taken from that camp this year, and there is yet a very large area of equally rich ground which has not been touched. Chinamen are not permitted to remain in Granite Creek in any capacity.

PEACEVILLE.

The short ride of a mile brought us back to Placerville, where we remained until next morning. The town has undergone much change and diminution in point of buildings, since our visit there last June. The large building which stood at the left upper corner of the Plaza, long known as Ben. Anderson's Washoe Saloon, the residence in the rear of it, and Rehr's large public house on the corner opposite the Washoe, on the line of the Plaza fronting toward Wolf creek; then the large public house on the lower side of the Plaza, next door to Abe Johnson's fine corner Magnolia Saloon, and two other buildings further along,—all these had been removed: the Washoe Saloon is now the mess house for the workmen, and Ben. Anderson's snug residence is now the office for the owners and managers of the Pioneer ledge and mill Company, three miles distant from Placerville, and the other buildings taken from about the Plaza are now located on lots in the new part of the camp on Granite creek. But though thus partially shorn, in the matter of buildings, Placerville is still a fair business camp. The saw mill above the town is busily worked, and daily turns out a large quantity of every variety of lumber used for building and mining purposes.

PIONEER CITY.

We left Placerville early on Sunday morning, and rode over to Pioneer City. The road is in very good condition for a mountain road. Along Ophir creek we saw a few men engaged in prospecting, and in each instance, to our inquiries, they responded that they were very well satisfied with the indications. The diggings on Ophir have almost universally paid richly, and the gold, like that taken from Lady's Cravice diggings, near Placerville, is noted for being the purest ever found in Southern Idaho—ranging from $17 to above $18 per ounce.

Pioneer City was reached in about an hour, the distance being about six miles. The general complaint of dull times is heard there, as in every other place—mining camp, rural town, interior city, or great seaboard mart—we hear of at this time, but to a stranger the complaint would seem uncalled for in Pioneer City. The mercantile houses of Cannady & Madigan, J. C. Carroll, Danskin Bros., Jas. Duncan, Morits & Co., the public houses of Holland & Peyton, John O'Donnell, John Graves, John Marnane, John Vesey, L. Haubrick, P. Keegan and Jerome Johnson; the fine and well patronized restaurants of M. Dolan and McCormick, the trade shops of Hugh Craig and F. McFarland—[illegible]esse, and the business to be seen going on through the day in them all, would cause one to believe that Pioneer City was excepted from the prevailing dullness and general decline of trade.

The diggings near by and for miles about Pioneer City are still yielding richly—in no place poorly. Even in the old "worked out" claims, wages are yet made, and in many of the claims the product is extravagant. As labor declines in price, together with the decline in the cost of living, nearly every foot of ground which has been worked all through that district will pay as well to the future delver as it did originally to the miner who opened the claim. Water and the disposition to labor will prove the truth of this prediction.

In an interview with Mr. Ben. Wilson, the great ditch owner and heavy mining operator of Pioneer City, we ascertained that a very important enterprise is now under way, which will vastly benefit the whole extent of mining country from above Pioneer to below Centerville. Mr. Wilson, O. G. Waterman and Wm. L. Law, are owners of the "Big Ditch" which now supplies water to claims for a length of nearly eleven miles, from where it taps Grimes' creek, on toward the celebrated Bummer Hill near Centreville. They propose now to raise this ditch, diminish its grade,—which is too great—and change in some places its course. It will also be extended so as to supply the rich Bummer Hill diggings, and other high hill claims all about Centreville, known to be very rich, with water. To do this over two miles of fluming will have to be constructed, some of it in great spans of seventy feet high. The expenditure for this enterprise will be heavy, but Mr. Wilson, who not only is one of the most active, pushing, energetic mining men in the country, but also one of the most successful—and who unites with his years of practical experience a thorough, large-minded, broad-spirited application of the fruits of that experience,—is well satisfied that the time for the work has come, and that it will be a success to the owners as well as of immeasurable benefit to the miners particularly, and to the merchants, mechanics, shopkeepers and laborers, to everybody in short, all the way from where the first supply of water is loosed upon the diggings to the last inch furnished, and to Pioneer, Centreville, and beyond. Of course whatever benefits those camps will redound proportionately to the welfare of this great trading and business mart of the Basin—our own city,—and to all in any way connected with trade operations here. It is a gigantic enterprise for this section, but the men who have undertaken it are not of the class who look back after they resolve upon their work. They first think what is best to be done; determine what to do and how to do it; then cease thinking and apply themselves to action. By next spring the water will flow through the improved and extended "Big Ditch," and then miles upon miles of ground which prospects handsomely, but which has all along laid idle for more lack of water to work it, will be actively, profitably mined. They will be white men who will own and work these new rich diggings, and room for hundreds of those sturdy welcome workers will be furnished by the timely, noble enterprise of Messrs. Wilson, Waterman and Law.

There is still a good deal of mining going on about Pioneer, although it is comparatively near the close of the active mining season, and from all that we could gather, the claims are generally paying fully up to expectations—in other words, better than wages, and in some cases much above that figure.

CENTREVILLE.

The ride to this place—distant six miles from Pioneer—was made in a little more than an hour. The road is more hilly than between Pioneer and Placerville, and though not in as good general condition, is a fair mountain road.

Centerville presented a very lively business appearance as we entered it. Sunday is the day for trading, and for paying off water bills, and for visits from the diggings all about town—just as in other mining camps. Trade and business were at full high while we tarried there. McDevitt's large public house was crowded with miners—white men and Chinese—who were having their accounts for water during the week adjusted by G. W. Thatcher, who owns with Mr. B. F. Channell the large ditches about there. Miners were busily purchasing supplies at the stores of J. L. Duke & Co., Ridge, Witt & Co., Moritz & Co.,—who have lately bought out M. Whitman & Co.—and others again crowded the stage house of Mat. Looney, the public houses of C. Hoeflin and Michael Murray, along the principal street. The big Chinese headquarters on the corner opposite McDevitt & Thatcher's was crammed with noisy, chattering Celestials, who had evidently "ontolice plenteo" gold dust from their claims during the week, and Centerville was certainly a lively camp to look upon.

Next year when the "Big Ditch" shall supply ample water to the vast area of ground all about Centerville, which has lain unworked for years because water could not be brought upon it, and which prospects everywhere richly, the camp will spring into new life as it were. It will be peopled up to its capacity, no vacant buildings will be there; but on every hand will be found the indications and proofs of active mining industry well rewarded, of healthy trade amply sustained, and of general business success. It will be a thriving camp for a number of years yet, beyond a doubt.

A Defeat which Insures Victory.

[From the S. F. Bulletin, Sept. 6.]

There is, this day, a clear Union majority of at least 10,000 in the State of California. Of this number, more than 5,000 did not go to the polls, and of the remainder, one moiety voted for Fay and the other for Haight. And yet with this clear and positive majority, the head of the ticket is beaten probably from 5,000 to 7,000 votes. What are the causes of this defeat? The Union party in this State has heretofore been so strong that no ordinary causes could reduce its strength beyond the winning point. It was left to the recent gubernatorial candidate to accomplish this inglorious work. When he put up the primaries and packed conventions, he not only defeated the will of the people, but from that time he insured his own defeat. The people were laughed at; the press which remonstrated against such wrongs and warned these men in the flush of Victory, that there was a day of reckoning coming, were hooted at by the spoilsmen. It was the boast of these men that the press had utterly failed to thwart their schemes, and that they had manipulated the primaries and secured nominations and managed everything their own way. The gubernatorial candidate not only put up the primaries for his own account, but he went down and parcelled out the municipal nominations among his friends who had aided him most. Not a nomination was made without his assent. The humiliating spectacle of a gubernatorial candidate descending to parcel out the spoils of every ward in the city, was seen to the honest shame of thousands of Union men. Nothing like it had happened in the latter political history of the State, and we think nothing like it will happen again, at least, during the next decade. Couple these facts with the well known antecedents of the leading spirit, and all the elements of defeat centered from the first in the gubernorial candidate. Nothing but the invincible power of numbers—such numbers as are not in the ranks of the Union party—could bear such a candidate on to victory. Had Bidwell, who was the first choice of two-thirds of the Union men of the State, and acceptable to all, not being tricked out of the nomination, he would have gone into office by a majority of at least 10,000 votes. With such a candidate at the head of the Union State ticket, the Democrats could have made only the feeblest rally.

What is the moral of this defeat? The Union party is not strong enough to carry bad men into power. It cannot afford even to take doubtful men, and on the strength of old excitements endeavor to run them into position. It can take up its best men and win every time. Failing to do this, it insures for itself defeat. There are 10,000 Union men in this State, as is seen by the results of the last election, who will be found at the polls with the right ballot when good men are presented for their support. The Democrats have profited by lessons of adversity. They put up many notoriously bad men. But days of overwhelming defeat came—not one too many or too long—and they learned that there was no chance of success without freedom from all trickery, and the nomination of their best men. The temporary success of that party is traced to this return. Without any wire-pulling, and scarcely with the intervention of any primaries, they brought into the field some, at least, of their strongest men. There was not a word of wrangling nor a charge of circumvention. All the steps taken were in perfect contrast with the machinery used under the leadership of the defeated gubernatorial candidate. It was a small thing to slur and malign the conductors of independent papers which have questioned these proceedings, in every stump speech during the canvass; but it was a part of the tactics which was arranged from the beginning. The power of the Union party to carry sheer dead-weight was overrated, and the influence of the independent press, to roll the weight off, was underrated. The reign of pocket dictators of the Union party is at an end for the next ten years; but there has been no change of the Union sentiment of the State. Some good men have suffered temporary defeat under bad leadership, and this is a matter of regret. They will triumph another time, divested of these unfortunate associations.

If the Union party will profit by this lesson, there will be no more rotten primaries, no more frauds in conventions, and no man put up as a leader, who cannot unite good men and marshal all the elements of victory.

NEW YORK.—Under the present Constitution of New York, the Lower House or the Assembly is composed of 128 members, elected by single districts, and the Senate of 32 members, elected by single districts. The Constitutional Convention, now in session, has decided to increase the membership of the Assembly to 130, the incumbents to be chosen by counties, and let the number of Senators remain as it is, the members to be chosen by single districts as at present. Greeley's project for "cumulative voting" received only 20 votes. A proposition for biennial sessions was voted down by a vote of 49 to 56.

UNFOUNDED.—The report that the Union party intended to urge the passage of a law by which hereafter no person will be allowed to vote unless he or she can read or write is unfounded. Only a thorough knowledge of the alphabet, a slight skirmishing among the ab, abs, and sufficient mathematical knowledge to determine with some degree of precision and certainty as to the sum of two and two will be considered absolutely indispensable in order to secure the right of suffrage. This will not invalidate more than a third of the Democratic vote.—S. F. Chronicle.

A company has just been formed in France, with a capital of 3,000,000 francs, to search for three Spanish galleons which were sunk by the English fleet at the commencement of the last century. The galleons in question were returning from Mexico, and had on board 500,000,000 piasters. They are still at the bottom of the sea, and several attempts to come at the treasure have been made but have failed. Powerful machinery is being constructed at Bordeaux.

IMPROVED STREETS.—In former years Portland had a reputation for the muddiest and most impassable streets of any place on the Pacific coast, but latterly a system of improvement has been inaugurated and partially carried out, which will result in our city becoming more and more like the older cities in the East in her graded and paved streets and sidewalks The improvementsof last Street from the terminus of the Nicholson pavement on Madison Street, to Harrison, by grading, planking and laying sidewalks is in contemplation also extending the improvement of Second Street to Harrison. The contracts for grading and laying sidewalks on Fourth Street, have already been awarded, and the Common Council has passed resolutions declaring that it is deemed expedient to improve Front Street to its intersection with Harrison, Washington to Park Avenue, and B Street from North Front to 5th When these contemplated improvements and repairs are completed, we can vie with any other city in the State for the passability of our thoroughfares

A WORTHY OBJECT.—It will be seen by reference to another column, that Professor Ailsop will lecture on next Tuesday evening at Ore Fino Hall on the subject, Lima and the Limaians, or, The Rough Log of a Voyage between San Blas, Mexico and Callao de Lima, Peru The proceeds of this lecture are for the benefit of the family of Mr. O'Connor, lately killed while in the discharge of his duty, as a peace officer of this city The lecturer is familiar with the scenes and incidents upon which he proposes to treat, and will no doubt arrange his facts in a style instructive and entertaining, so that all who attend will doubtless be repaid, besides having the consciousness that they have contributed something in aid of a family who have been so unexpectedly and sadly deprived of the protecting and supporting care of husband and father. Let all who can, attend, and everybody purchase a ticket

A DEAD LOCK.—It will be seen by reference to the report of the Council proceedings of Wednesday evening, in yesterday's paper, that the City Board came to a deadlock in voting upon several measures which were before it for action. One member being absent, the remaining eight were equally divided, upon sundry motions,so that nothing could be forced to a final vote by one party, or laid upon the table by the other. This was true of several matters that were called up, and it is probable that the wheels of the city government will remain about in statu quo until Councilman Ripley returns from Idaho, whither he has gone to sojourn for an indefinite length of time.

TO SETTLERS ON PUBLIC LAND.—The plats of the public surveys of the following townships were filed in the Land Office at Oregon City on the 12th day of September, 1867, viz: Townships 1 and 2 South, Ranges 24, 25 and 26 East; Township 2 North, Ranges 20 and 21 East; and Townships 1 and 2 North, Ranges 19, 22, 23 and 24 East. These lands are now subject to entry under the Homestead and Pre-emption laws. Settlers who commenced settlement prior to the survey, are required to file their declaratory statements under the Pre-emption laws within three months from this date No homestead entry can be allowed upon land which was unsurveyed at the time of settlement. OWEN WADE, Register.

SOME OX.—A mammoth ox, which weighs 3,600 pounds has been forwarded to Sacramento from this city. He is Kentucky raised, of Durham blood, is owned in Oregon, and goes by the name of "Orizaba Baby." He is to hold daily levees at the coming State Fair, where he will doubtless attract great attention.—S. F. Times

Our California neighbor is slightly mistaken in the above item, as to the name and nativity of the ox in question. Said ox never pawed the soil of "Old Kentuck," but "grew to his present enormous stature" in Oregon; and has been called the "Oregon Baby" from a "yearling."

RETURNED.—His Honor, the City Recorder, returned from the Upper Columbia on last evening, well pleased with the trip and looking as hearty as ever. He informs us that Senator Williams made an effective speech at the Dalles on Tuesday evening to a large audience. The Senator's political foes were unable to meet his powerful arguments on the general issues of the day, and all were enlisted of his soundness on the Mint question. He went on to Umatilla and will return on Saturday.

LOW WATER.—The water in the Willamette river is now about at its lowest stage, and the steamers reach points above Salem with much difficulty. Until the railroad is built, and even after, much of the produce of the State must come to this market by means of teams, as the low water during the fall of the year renders navigation uncertain to some extent. These circumstances render the new city of the construction of good roads through the valley almost imperative.

PIONEER GUARD.—This popular company will go to Oswego on Thursday next, 19th inst., on a target and pic-nic excursion. Arrangements have been made to accommodate all who wish to take part in the festivities of the day. The steamer John H. Couch has been chartered for the occasion, and will ply between this place and Oswego, the place selected for the exercises. During the day music will be furnished, and those who wish to "trip the light fantastic" will have the opportunity.

SENATOR CORBETT.—Hon. H. W. Corbett, U.S. Senator, goes to San Francisco by the Orizaba, where he will remain until his departure for Washington to attend the approaching session of Congress. The best wishes of his constituents go with him, and his conduct heretofore warrants the belief that the interests of our State are safe in his hands. Senator Williams, now on a tour up the Columbia river, will probably go East about the 23d inst.

SICKNESS.—A good deal of sickness is prevailing in the Willamette valley at this time, although not of a serious character. Most of it, it is likely, results from the very dry and hot weather of the month of August, together with the too free use of green fruit so abundant in the country. Oregon, generally, has the healthiest climate in the United States, and with due precaution on the part of the people, the services of physicians could be almost entirely dispensed with.

SPRINKLES.—The streets of Portland were sprinkled yesterday morning in the natural way, by a copious shower of rain. Did we not feel that it is the precursor of the "more abundant shower" that will soon come, we would hail it as a welcome visitor. As it is, our "webs" are moistened, and we are rid of the clouds of dust that were raised by every breeze that passed, before the genial fall of the liquid element.

SIDEWALKS.—It is estimated that one mile of sidewalk was laid in this city during the month of August. Five miles more are in course of construction and will be completed this fall, thus adding six miles to that already laid, during the present season Most, if not all of this walk is of the required dimensions, and greatly enhances the appearance of our city, as well as the comfort and convenience of pedestrians

MARVIN THE WIZARD.—This renowned personage is here, and will give an exhibition at the Oro Fino Hall on to-morrow evening. His fame as a magic performer has preceded him, and we predict a grand rush to his exhibitions while he remains in Portland. Ticket office open at 10 o'clock to-day. Let all who wish to witness the feats of the unequalled magician procure seats at an early hour.

SPEAKING AND BUSINESS.—Richardson, the inimitable, will be on hands this morning at ten o'clock at No. 21, North Third street, between B and C, to make one of his appeals to the public, and to sell at auction a fine lot of furniture. A splendid opportunity is offered to those wishing to purchase, and besides it will pay you to go and hear A. B. R. talk to the crowd that will be there

RECORDER'S COURT.—Two or three "drunks" will come up for a hearing in this court to-day. Also the examination of John Brown, arrested at Salem on a charge of larceny. The business in this court has been unusually dull during the week. We hope the session of the Grand Lodge of Good Templars had a good effect on the majority of the customers of the Recorder's bar.

ARRESTED.—A man by the name of Cockly was taken into custody, night before last, by officer Brannon, for conduct unbecoming a sober man and a Good Templar. In short Mr. C. was drunk and disorderly, and was taken to the calaboose to sleep off the effect of his potations, and await the return of Judge Hoffman, for the further disposition of his case

STEAMER SENATOR'S MANIFEST.—The following freights were brought down from Oregon City by the Senator yesterday 393 sks flour, 41 sks wheat, bf bbl dried fruit, 62 gunnies bacon, 61 boxes fruit, 7 boxes nails, 7 sks do; 20 lake and 10 pkge mdse, 4 boxes eggs, 1 keg butter, 1 bale furs, 1 bale deer skins and 2 chairs.

CORRECTION.—In the report of Council proceedings, in yesterday's OREGONIAN, the petition of J. P Walker, road —for the establishment of the grade of "Hamilton and Water streets," instead of "Columbia street from Front to the Willamette river," as it should have been.

LECTURE AND SEANCE.—Benj Todd will deliver a farewell lecture at Oro Fino Hall this evening, after which Mrs. Foye will give one of her seances. All are invited to attend No charge for admission. Go, hear and see for yourselves and be satisfied

U. S. SUPREME COURT.—This Court met yesterday at 10 A. M., Judge Field presiding. Several appealed cases were called up, but none were brought to a final hearing, owing to the absence of attorneys The Court adjourned until ten o'clock this morning.

GO TO BERMAN BROS., on corner Front and Morrison streets for your custom made clothing

GOOD AND CHEAP.—We took occasion on yesterday to call in at the store of Messrs. Kohn & Fisbel on Front street, where we saw one of the largest stocks of gent's ready-made clothing we ever saw in Portland, and the prices were remarkably low, so low in fact, that a very small sum of money would purchase a very fine suit of clothes. Our readers would do well to examine their immense stock.

"FAMILY DYE COLORS."—The most useful and welcome articles found in almost every household in the land, are the FAMILY DYE Colors of Howe & Stevens. They can always be relied upon, are easily used, and cost but a trifle. Sold by Smith & Davis.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK OF IDAHO—BOISE CITY, I. T.—Organized March 11th, 1867, (with circulation) under Act of Congress, approved June 3d, 1864. Authorized capital $500,000. Paid up capital, $100,000. E. M. Bulkell, President. O W Moore, Cashier. Collections of Notes and Accounts on the principal places in Idaho Territory promptly attended to Exchange for Coin or Currency on this Bank can be purchased of Ladd & Tilton, Portland, Or.

GREEN RIVER MINES.—The Montana Post of the 31st August says: We have been shown a letter received by a gentleman at Summit from his brother, H. B. Hubbell, at the Green River mines, written before the Indian troubles He is recorder of Shoshone district, or was before the Indians drove them out. He did not at the date of the letter, "think there was anything yet struck to justify a big stampede He was of the party who struck the rich quartz lead He says there is a small dirt crevice in it, that will yield from $100 to $1 000 to the pan, and the rock is also very rich, some places showing free gold with nuggets from the size of a pin head to the weight of $10 to $12, in others not showing free gold at all. Some person from Salt Lake City offered to put a 30 stamp mill on the lead this summer The boys valued their claims at $100,000 each They had adopted the Montana quartz laws Several leads in the vicinity had been staked and recorded, one company having recorded six leads Only one gulch had been found. The big lead, a depth of five feet, had a 3 foot 9 inch crevice, and a half bushel of decomposed quartz, and yielded 50 ounces of what was said in Salt Lake to be worth $19 25 per oz. We see from the Salt Lake papers that large numbers of men are returning to the mines. A party will start from here in the early part of the week for the same locality.

Important Notice to Mechanics.—The demand in the city of San Francisco for Ship Carpenters, Caulkers and Boiler-Makers, is unusually great at the present moment. Competent mechanics will find immediate employment by the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, the Oregon, California and Mexican Steamship Company, the California Steam Navigation Company, and the various Ferry Companies.

All the above mentioned companies are making improvements of such magnitude that able-bodied men need not be idle a single day. The present demand for workmen must continue for years to come, as the amount of work actually now contracted for, and in contemplation, will furnish employment for every mechanic on the Pacific coast

Wages, $5 50 per day, in gold!

Capable men who are now seeking employment in Oregon and the interior towns of California, can obtain regular work here, at the price above given, by asking for it

Let them come as soon as they choose They are needed in San Francisco.

The wages of men employed about steamers and ships are always of the highest grade, and men who can do such work have never been known to lack employment.

In all cases where men do overwork, the extra hours are at double pay.

In no place is there so much overwork and nightwork done as in San Francisco, as haste and despatch are the watchwords here, and the companies are ready to pay for such extra work.

San Francisco, August 24, 1867.

Important Notice to Ship-Carpenters, Caulkers and Boiler-Makers.

Brothers, beware of and do not be deceived by the above lying poster, which is gotten up by parties who a few weeks ago threatened that they would flood the market with mechanics, for the purpose of destroying trade organizations and breaking up the eight-hour system.

There is no unusual demand for the above-mentioned class of mechanics. There are, and have been for months, from fifty to one hundred and fifty men idle, who are most anxious to work.

The Pacific Mail Steamship Company, California, Oregon and Mexico Steamship Company, California Steam Navigation Company, and the Ferry Companies, are at the present time building two steamboats, one is nearly done; the other will give work to about twenty-five carpenters for three and a half months.

There is but comparatively little repairing done, the P. M. S. S. Co.'s ships having been extensively repaired within the last year.

On the boats now building, $5 per day is being paid, no higher wages being demanded, the $5 50 which is offered in the card being paid for old work and on short jobs.

Capable men in Oregon and the interior towns of California had better remain there, as there are at all times from one-fourth to one-half more men in the city than can find employment.

The P. M. S. S. Co., for the last ten years, have given steady employment to not more than ten Ship-Carpenters; the other two Companies probably as many more; the Ferry Companies not pretending to give steady employment to any number of Carpenters or Caulkers.

Extra work does not amount to five days' work per man a year.

In conclusion, fellow-mechanics, we would say to you, an attempt is being made to destroy all Trade Organizations by the capitalists of this city.

Beware! Do not be deceived by the representations of parties who are ashamed or afraid to give their names.

By order of the Association.

Attest: JOHN P. RANFIELD,
Secretary Journeyman Shipwrights' Association.

Mr. Felix Goes Trout-Fishing.

[From the London Society.]

Mr. Felix began to grow weary of his horses, and hungered for a new amusement. He rebelled, sometimes with savage emphasis, against that process of idealization by which Mrs. Felix would transform him into a royal hunter of the stag; and hinted, in no gentle manner, that she had better burn her English history, and not make a fool of herself. She saw this vacillation without profound grief. Her highest hope had been realized by the brilliant exploit of her husband in being in at the taking of the deer, although it seemed to her very shameful that she should not have been allowed to hang up a pair of antlers in the hall.

"There's no more deer to run after," he said, with ungrammatical force; "and what's the use of nagging? I tell you my name is Samuel Felix, and not William Rufus; and what's more, I'm going to try trout-fishing, as a far more sensible thing than galloping over muddy fields after a lot of nasty dogs."

Accordingly, Mr. Felix came up to town, and there launched into boundless extravagance in the purchase of such a collection of rods, lines, flies, and the treatises on the art of fishing, as surely never before threatened the instant clearance of all English rivers. Nothing which human ingenuity or the fishing tackle maker's art could devise, was wanting in my friend's superb list of preparations; and, burdened by this armful of miscellaneous implements, he made his way back again into Kent.

For a week I heard nothing of him. At the end of that time I found him, one warm afternoon, busily engaged in throwing a fly-line across the lawn in front of the Beeches.

"Everybody thinks he can throw a fly until he tries," said he. "Now, do you see that bit of paper lying there?"

He swept the rod forward from his left shoulder, and the point of the line dropped within two inches of the mark. I was surprised at his proficiency.

"It has taken me a week's constant practice to do that," said he, proudly; "and to-morrow, as you know, I'm going to put my skill to the test."

"But what have you got at the end of the line?" I asked, noticing one or two small black specks.

"Oh," said he, "these are two or three split shot, just to steady the line as it falls, you know. I wasn't told to do so by any book; but you've no idea how it guides the line against the wind and whether and enables you to drop the fly precisely where you want it."

"It's a beautiful arrangement," I said to him, after looking on the lawn; and doubtless to-morrow the trout will be grateful to you for giving them such a plain notice of the arrival of an artificial fly."

"You'll see," he replied, confidently, "how deftly I shall drop lead and hook and all over their noses."

Indoors, Mrs. Felix was in a mood of mingled melancholy and sulks. As we entered, she asked her husband with some asperity, when he was going to take his trash off the table, to allow tea to be brought in. The trash turned out to be Mr. Felix's collection of flies, which, for the purpose of comparison, he had taken out of his book, and arrayed side by side on large sheets of white paper.

"There" said he "there is only one maker in Great Britain who can produce a Durham Ranger like this. What do you think of Spey Dog?—do you see that there's salmon in the world could resist that tag hackle at the shoulder, and that glittering sun of tinsel? Now, I'll wager you haven't in your book an O'Donoghue to be compared with this one—let us see."

I informed Mr. Felix that, in preparing to fish in Kent, I felt myself quite above flies for all the rivers in Europe—a piece of intelligence which seemed to annoy him.

"How can you call yourself a fisher unless you are ready to fish in any water?" said he; "if I go to the Spey, or the Usk, or the Dee, or the Tyne, I am prepared at all points. Besides, I consider that as mere triumphs of art, these flies each having [illegible] at them—look at the Green Tail—was there ever anything so like nature? Look at this Parson, and this March Brown, and this soldier Palmer!"

Mr. Felix held a gaudy fly, and held it out with a slight—self-[illegible] appearing on his face.

"Why, my dear fellow," he said, "which I think ought to be proposed to call it Count Bismarck. Black body, yellow ribs, claret hackle, and silver tag; don't you think it is adapted for those afternoons when everything gets a sultry, [illegible] Huge? Perhaps gold thread would be better; but the first time I go trout fishing on a large scale to try my Bismarck, and I have great hope of its success."

"It's more than I have of yours, Mr. Felix," said my wife's friend ironically; "there, you've got the whole room packed with your rods and flies, and you haven't brought home a single trout. Why the children can do better. Jack caught a fish as long as a [illegible] last night which he caught with a bit of string and a worm."

"If I had any of the children fishing down in the stream, Mrs. Felix," said her husband, firmly, "I will give them as good a duckling as ever got in their lair."

Mrs. Felix smiled disdainfully. She was not to be overawed by her husband's flourish of rhetoric. It was the calmness which made Mr. Felix rather a person to be sorry for, that led him to admit of his trying his experiment on the river at Inkabiding a mill pond [illegible] minutes walk from the Beeches. My friend therefore disappeared, and in a few moments returned in a full suit of fishing costume. His reappearance seems to bristle all over with hooks and other implements of piscatorial warfare. He wore a water-proof fishing-stocking, secured at the bottom by a pair of thick [illegible] which again rose from a pair of large and unpolished boots. Spare lengths of [illegible] carried himself over his immense [illegible] in one hand he held a handsome rod, in the other a shiny landing-net; from top to toe he was deftly and wonderfully made.

To give him a fair chance, I resolved to leave all the water to himself; and thereupon we left the house and [illegible]. It was a beautiful day in the beginning of June; the air was [illegible] and warm, some rain having fallen half an hour before, and a slight wind just [illegible] the surface of the great pond in which Mr. Felix proposed to fish. Nervously, perhaps, but with some confidence, he approached the edge of the water at the point farthest from the [illegible] where there was a gentle current coming [illegible] a small bridge.

At the opposite side, a few inches from a low [illegible] bank and under the shadow of some [illegible] lay a good sized trout, sleepily motionless, but dogging often to look at the flies dancing above him. Mr. Felix grasped my arm convulsively.

"Don't stir! Can you catch a glimpse of him [illegible] under?—you'll see how I shall drop a fly over him."

With one or two preparatory casts to get the line out, Mr. Felix at length succeeded in fulfilling his promise. As was to be expected, the "drop" of the shot on the water startled the fish, which with a quick shoot vanished from sight, leaving only a long wave in its wake. It was some time before Mr. Felix could realize the fact of his having been so bitterly disappointed. When he did, he made a few uncalled-for remarks relating to nothing in particular.

"I suppose I must take the shot off, after all," said he disconsolately; "but I don't think there will be much difficulty in throwing a fly on a night like this."

With a clear line, he now proceeded to try a few casts. The first throw brought all the line curling down upon the water, some half dozen yards in front of him. Amazement seized him; and then I saw him clench his teeth. Up went the rod, back went the long, fine streak, and then, with a splendid swoop, he threw his right hand forward. There was a sharp crack above his head, as if Felix was driving on a team of forty horses; and the next moment the little gut, in a rather uncertain manner, alit upon the surface not an inch further out.

"You needn't throw again, in the mean time," I remarked to him.

"Why?" he asked, fiercely; for a fine trout had risen opposite us, in the middle of the water.

"Because the creek nipped the fly off."

I thought tears of vexation would have come into the eyes of the gentle angler, so downcast did he look, so thunderstruck, so annoyed. Mechanically he took out his splendid assortment of impossible insects, and selected a fly which would certainly have produced instant vertigo in any trout coming near it.

The evening is rather dull," said he, "and they want color to attract them. But what's the use of my throwing and throwing, if this wretched gut won't go out? I tell you there's something wrong. I've seen people fishing in this very mill here who did not take half the care I do, and their lines, because it was a good line, fell most beautifully and lightly, the fly dropping on the water like the wing of a gnat, and not the least ripple to be seen. I'll tell you what I'll do, I'll write to the papers and say that and Sons are no better than a lot of impostors, and that their rods and lines are not fit to put before swine."

So saying, Mr. Felix proceeded once more to lash the water, the line almost invariably curling itself round his fingers as it fell about a rod's length from the bank. In every position he stood, every sweep of his arm [illegible], but his attempt was unavailing. [illegible] cry of the situation, the trout was [illegible] around him.

"The wind's [illegible] the way," said he, at length, with a great effort to conceal his anger; "let us try down by the mill there."

Passing over a sluice gate, we found ourselves in front of a new sphere of action, and Mr. Felix was about to recommence his painful labors, when an unlucky accident befell him. Concealed beneath a group of willows hard by, a swan, as we afterwards learned, was hatching, and no sooner had we appeared in the neighborhood, than the male swan—a remarkably large, handsome bird—took our approach to mean an attack upon his prospective progeny. Dashing through the water towards Mr. Felix, who was nearest him, he struggled up and on the bank, and made a furious charge upon my friend, who, fortunately for himself, involuntarily retreated. In the first paroxysm of his terror, however, he had not noticed that immediately behind him was a deep ditch, filled with green, stagnant water, the leakings from the mill-head. At the first blow aimed at his leg by the wing of the swan, Mr. Felix jumped back, and therefore disappeared suddenly from the light of day, leaving the swan master of the situation. As the unhappy sportsman crept up the opposite bank of the ditch, a mass of mud and tangled weeds, his plight was surely sad enough, but to add to his horror, he found that the mishap had included the breaking of his best trout rod.

"Can you see a boy about?" he asked of me, with a strange look, when he wiped his lips. "I'll give him a sovereign to run up to my house."

"What for?"

"For my revolver."

"Do you mean to shoot that swan?"

"I do."

"You'll miss it, and kill somebody about the mill, if you try."

Eventually Mr. Felix was persuaded to remove as much of the mud from his clothes as was possible, and to wend his disconsolate way homeward. I do not mean to lift the veil of domestic privacy, and to say anything of the sarcasms which my poor hero bore, during the evening, with more than his accustomed equanimity.

At an early hour next morning, the wagonette was at the door, and Mr. Felix, once again radiant with hope, ready to jump in. An enormous hamper was safely stowed away, and when the remaining room was prettily well occupied by spare rods, landing nets and what not, there arrived to complete the party, a Mr. Monroe, an aged Waltonian of short stature, silvery hair, and thin, nervous brown fingers, which had many a time lured a four pounder to his doom.

"Hasn't Lord Switchem some rayther gude fishing about there?" he asked, knowing nothing of the little accident which had broken the intimacy between his lordship and Mr. Felix.

"Nothing to speak of," said Mr. Felix, contemptuously; "besides, he's a coarse, ungentlemanly man, fit only for hanging about stables and talking about dogs and horses. When I made it all right with Sir Harry about our going to day, nothing could exceed his courtesy: and Sir Harry has something like fishing, as you'll see.

A drive of half an hour or so brought us to the outskirts of Sir Harry's grounds; and the wagonette having been left at the nearest inn, we soon found our way to the river. The water was in prime condition, as it came circling and flowing down through the low rich meadows, which were yellow with buttercups; and already in the deep pools, whither the rush of the stream sent multitudinous drowned flies, there could be seen the quick "flop" of the rising trout, followed by slowly winding circles on the dull surface. Our fishing ground extended from these meadows, where the course of the stream was marked by a few pollard willows, or a line of low alders, to the lawn in front of Sir Harry's house, which was perhaps two miles off. Here, therefore, was plenty of scope for Mr. Felix's trial of skill. The morning, besides, was cloudy, with here and there a shaft of sunlight breaking through; the air was warm, the stream was not very clear, there was no wind but such as simply to take the mirror off the surface of the water; and what more could the piscatorial student want?

I observed, however, that Mr. Felix, while preparing for his first sport, kept away from his Scotch friend, and threw his fly in a furtive manner upon a pool where no one could see how it dropped.

"Maister Felix," cried the latter, "what sort o' flees will ye pit on?"

"I'm trying the Red Palmer," he replied, with a critical glance up and down the river.

"Losh me!" said Mr. Monroe, "the Red Pawmer on a morning like this? Dinna ye see the May flee comin' down by the dizzin?"

The words were scarcely uttered when the old man, with a quick motion of the wrist, struck sharply and firmly, and a fine trout leapt clean out of the water. A little run up stream, with the line gripping him stiffly, soon exhausted his obstinacy, and presently he was being quietly drawn towards the bank. Mr. Felix's man came running forward with the landing-net.

"Now, my man, be careful. Dinna ye break my line, or I'll pit ye in the water after the fish."

But no such accident occurred; and Mr. Felix, not very joyfully, perhaps, came up to look at the first capture, which was a good trout of about two pounds weight.

"You took that with the May fly, did you?" said he, running to his own pool, and taking out his pocket book.

But alas for the vanity of human hopes! The May flies were coming down in "dizzins"—hovering upon the water in the most tempting manner, but the great, sloppy, grey monsters underneath would not look at them. When they absolutely allowed the natural flies to glide over their nose, how was it possible to force upon them an artificial one? So the old Scotchman set to work to try a series of experiments, and the longer he tried the more astonished did he become. They would not look at his flies, let alone rise to them; and in vain we both whipped and lashed away at the water. All the time, likewise, that these rather mournful efforts were being made, we could hear the muttered anathemas of Mr. Felix, as he curled his line down upon the water, or hooked a weed, or hung up his fly upon the willows. At times we could see him on his knees, stretching his hand over the water to extricate the hook; at another he was half-way up a tree, breaking branches and tugging at the elusive gut. Perspiration was streaming over his face; but as yet the fish bag held only one captive.

And now the sun came out in its full strength, until the long green meadows and the great chestnuts to Sir Harry's park seemed to quiver in the lambent heat. We were forced to leave this part of the stream and seek another portion, where the overhanging trees on the southern side sheltered the water from the fierce glare. Here, however, we had no better luck. The scout were plentiful, and rose tolerably well; but no fly which we could throw them would they look at. Deep despair was beginning to fall upon the party, when it was proposed to relieve the wretched tedium of the day by taking luncheon. With a sense of glad relief he could not conceal, Mr. Felix laid aside his rod, and proceeded to open the great hamper which his man, assisted by a boy, had brought up into the meadow. The champagne was put into a creek of the river, the white cloth was laid on the warm, dry grass, knives, forks, plates, and what not were forthcoming, and soon the air was redolent of mint sauce, and lamb, and tongue, and crisp, cool lettuce. Mr. Felix's spirits revived. He talked of the delights of angling; he jocularly pointed out to Mr. Mearns that he was one ahead; he vowed that, fortified by this luncheon, we should return and do wonders.

The old Scotchman, on the other hand, was restrained and silent. A whole collection of artificial flies was evidently whirling about in his brain. Mentally he was arguing strenuously with those incomprehensible and abominable trout.

About this moment Sir Harry's keeper came up, and was persuaded, with much persuasion, to take a plateful of cold lamb and salad. He likewise had some other less material dainties, all of which he consumed some little distance apart, occasionally returning to us to speak of the water and of the fish. Finally, he had some champagne out of a silver mug, and this proved to be the key to unlock the secret chambers of his heart. Cold lamb, and pastry he had withstood; but champagne in a silver mug overcame him. He came over for the last time, and told us that Sir Harry had recently tried almost every fly—even the May fly—without getting a rise; but so soon as he showed the alder-fly, the trout rose and were slaughtered in hosts.

Mearns jumped to his feet, and was quickly out of sight.

"I think I have got some alder flies," said Mr. Felix; "but, indeed, I don't know where they are. I shall label my book as soon as I get home."

Alder-flies were soon upon every rod; and before half an hour was over, eight good fish had been landed. The ease with which the trout took the bait maddened Mr. Felix, who had not yet caught one, his chief performances having been those excursions up trees which I previously mentioned. The stream was in most parts so narrow that there was no difficulty about dropping the fly on the proper place; but unfortunately he invariably dropped on the same place two or three yards of curling line, which either made the trout shoot out of sight, or caused him to lie still with contemptuous indifference.

"It's a gran' water to fish," said the Scotchman; "I never saw the like o't. But what's wrang wi' ye, Maister Felix? Ye seem unco doon spearited."

"It's all this confounded rod!" said Felix, grinding his teeth; "a man might have all the strength of Sampson and not be able to throw a line with it. All it can do is to pin the fly upon branches."

"Dear me!" said Mearns, compassionately, "and ye has na brocht a single trout to land. Here, take my rod, and I'll play the part o' Samson for a while."

So the old man took Mr Felix's rod, and deftly, with those long, thin fingers of his, dropped the fly over the head of one of the trout that lay beneath the opposite bank. There was a slight movement in the water, the fly was sucked in, and then the line grew suddenly tight as the gleaming side of the fish cut through the quiet stream.

"It's a wee bit thing, but better than none," was the remark, as another pound and a half was added to the general stock.

Suddenly Mr. Felix uttered a loud cry, and turning, we saw him, with an ashen pallor of face, tugging at the line, and attempting to lift out of the water a fish which had at length been enticed into taking his fly.

"Losh bless me, man!" cried the Scotchman, "ye'll brush my rod to bits! Dinna pu' like that!"

"What am I to do, then?" cried Felix, in the greatest possible excitement. "He's a monster! He'll get off! He's a dozen pound weight! I believe he's a salmon"

The next unconscious prompting of his intense desire to secure this leviathan was to let the reel run, lest the line should be broken and he escape. The consequence may be imagined. The efforts of the fish ceased, and Mr Felix found it impossible by any amount of pulling to dislodge him from his retreat in the bed of the river. Slowly my friend proceeded up the bank of the stream wind ing in the line as he went, until it was clearly demonstrated that Mr. Felix's captive had taken refuge in a bed of green weed half way across. What was to be done? The fish would not stir. Stones could never reach him. Then Mr. Felix, moved by the sarcasms of his wife, were no longer his water proofs of the day before; he had been taunted into dressing himself like a human being.

I'm not going to lose such a fish for a pair of wet feet," said he, valiantly, as he jumped into the river.

There, however, progress was no easy matter; for the current was strong, and water considerable more than knee deep, and the bed of the stream matted with these tangled weeds. Carefully Mr. Felix took the line in his hand, and began to trace the fish to his lair. He kicked away the weeds as he went farther out; and yet there were no signs of the dislodgment of the line. Kicking and tugging in equal proportions, he had at length reached the middle of the stream, when he uttered a slight cry; there was a flash of something cutting through the water; either excitement or a desire to seize the fish caused him to stumble forward, and then our hero went down, face first, into the stream, while the broken line floated lightly back to the rod, which Mr. Mearns held in his hand. Snorting like a young whale, Mr. Felix struggled to his feet again. He glared wildly around; but he caught his man laughing, instant dismissal would have rewarded presumption.

"As it is," said he, boldly, as he came dripping to the side, "I hooked the biggest fish of the day!"

"The day's no' over yet," said Mr. Mearns, quietly, watching with his keen eye for the first rise; then as he saw Mr. Felix was about to depart, he added: "Ye're no ganging back? Hoots, man! In the sun out there ye'll be as dry as a red herrin' in twenty minutes!"

"I have no ambition to be as dry as a red herring," replied Mr. Felix, with a sneer; "and I am not going to catch a cold for the biggest basket of trout that ever was filled. But I shall take my rod and landing net with me; and perhaps when you find me at the inn on your return I may have one or two fish to add to your store."

So saying he departed—a mournful spectacle. He had not, however, passed out of sight when I saw him crouching down by the side of the river, apparently going through a singular performance with his landing-net. When I again looked he was gone; and the circumstance had passed from mind when we found him, in the evening, seated in the parlor of the inn, comfortably smoking and reading the newspapers.

"Did you catch anything as you returned?" I asked.

"Look in the landing net," said he, proudly; it's in the corner."

And there, sure enough, was a fine trout, carefully wrapt up in sedge-leaves. Mr. Mearns carefully scanned it.

"What flee did you catch it wi'?" he asked.

"The alder fly, of course," replied Felix.

"That's maist extraordinar'!" said the old Scotchman.

"Why?" demanded Felix, not without a certain fierceness in his tone.

"Because the trout's blin'!"

"And can't a blind trout swallow a fly?" asked Mr. Felix, grown sud denly angry, "or how in all the earth could it remain alive?"

"I dinna ken," replied the Scotchman, "as I never tried to make a blin' fish see a flee."

But, as Mr. Felix pointed out to me, there was no necessity for telling Mrs. Felix that the trout was blind, women having many peculiar and unreasonable prejudices.

SAN FRANCISCO MARKET REVIEW.

SAN FRANCISCO, Sept. 7, 1867.

The past ten days have been very quiet and sales have been limited. We have nothing new to remark of business transactions. The markets are well supplied with all descriptions of goods, and no speculative feeling is observable in any direction.

The stock market continues much depressed, and the tendency of prices still downward.

Money, or more properly, capital, continues to increase in abundance, and is seeking investments in various directions, but mostly in real estate. There are numerous small investments by individual purchasers, but the great bulk of means is put on mortgages upon land at rates which still tend downward. The demand at 10 per cent. per annum does not appear to be equal to the supply.

For the first time in months, (the Ocean Rover) has been laid on the berth for Boston. This ship will have quick despatch, having 600 tons of copper ore already engaged.

The brig Percy Edwards, with Japan dates to July 26th, arrived Sept. 4th. She brings as cargo 4,081 packages China and 1,042 packages Japan Tea.

By way of Foo Chow we have Hongkong dates to July 19th. The only vessel up for this port was the British ship Hogarth. The Hongkong markets were quiet. China rice was quoted at $3 50 ₱ picul, California flour, $8 00@$9 00 in bbls and $1 65@$1 75 in qr sks; California Wheat, $3 40 ₱ picul.

The passenger arrivals at this port by way of the sea for the month of August were 2,878 and the departures 1,262, showing a net gain of 1,616. In the corresponding month last year the arrivals were 2,131 and the departures 1,421. Comparing this two months, therefore, we have a gain this year of 747 in the increased number of arrivals and 159 in the decreased number of departures, or a total of 906. Included in the arrivals for the past month were 2,348 by way of the Isthmus, 154 from China, 126 from Australia and 111 from British Columbia. In the same month last year the arrivals by way of the Isthmus were 1,428, from China 290, from Australia 140, and from British Columbia 67. From these figures it will be seen that about 900 more passengers arrived here via Panama last month than during the same month last year. The departures by way of the Isthmus were 1,198 against 1,234 in August, 1866. During the eight months ending August 31st, our arrivals seaward were 25,989 and the departures 12,915, showing a gain of 12,065. These figures compare as follows with the same time last year;

	1867.	1866
Arrivals	24,080	17,404
Departures	12,615	14,049
Gain	12,065	3,355

The arrivals this year show an increase of 100 ₱ cent. over the departures, while for the same time last year the increase was only 24 ₱ cent.

The tonnage arrivals at this port from all sources for the month of August were 221 vessels, representing 81,670 tons, while the clearances were 70 vessels, representing 50,193 tons. During the same month the arrivals were 234 vessels, aggregating 85,766 tons, and the clearance of 51 vessels of 42,886 tons. Thus notwithstanding our arrivals were 37 more than in July, the aggregate tonnage was 4,000 tons less. In the corresponding month last year our arrivals were 221 vessels, representing 60,324 tons, and our clearances 63 vessels, representing 47,234 tons.

The steamship Great Republic sailed for Yokohama and Hongkong on the 3d, with a large and valuable freight, including 1,000 flasks Quicksilver, 1,700 bbls Flour, 6,800 box Potatoes, 100 bbls Salmon and nearly $1,000,000 in Treasure. She also had about 700 passengers, mostly Chinese.

With one exception, the exports for the month just ended are the largest yet recorded, reaching in value $3,116,199. This exception was April, 1867, when the total reached $3,223,744.

The Gold deposits at the United States Branch Mint in this city for the month of August were 141,005 ounces, against 107,641 ounces for the corresponding month last year. The largest amount received on deposit during any single day of the past month was 13,544 ounces; the smallest amount 773 ounces, while the daily average has been 6,522 ounces. Six times during the month the daily deposits exceeded 10,000 ounces. In addition, an unusually large amount of Silver was received on deposit, both for coinage and refining. Ordinarily, the Silver deposits at the Mint are quite nominal, but during the past month deposits of Silver were made on 17 out of the 27 working days, the total aggregating 64,907 ounces. Since the re-opening of the Mint in January, the Gold deposits have been 629,567 ounces against 384,526 ounces, being an increase this year of 74,041 ounces.

The fishing schooner Harriet Rowe arrived on the 5th from the north, with 65,000 Cod. This makes the thirteenth arrival this season, aggregating 478,000 Fish. Some eight or ten vessels are yet to arrive. The total catch last season was 724,000 fish.

The steamship Idaho sailed for Honolulu on the 5th, being the pioneer vessel in the monthly mail service between this port and the Hawaiian Islands, called for by the contract of the Government with the California, Oregon and Mexico Steamship Company. The Idaho had an assorted cargo valued at $31,000, including 250 bbls Flour.

The careful observer cannot fail to have noticed the increased attention which is being paid to the development of the mineral resources of this coast. It is quite true that there is not much talk about the mines as in former years, when companies were formed and claims staked out with amazing rapidity. The time for forming companies to exist only in name, it is hoped has forever passed. The idea that a mine can be developed by simply issuing stock and palming it off upon the public, has long since been exploded. People now seem to think that the best way to get anything out of a mine is to work it. Hence the practical turn which the mining interest of this coast has of late assumed. The increased attention now paid to mining does not seem to be confined to the precious metals nor to any particular mineral region.

The election [illegible] continues to be the topic of general discussion in the business community, to the exclusion of matters of trade, and the general dullness consequent thereon gives us nothing of interest to record in the way of transactions.

FLOUR—Sales both for consumption and export continue tolerably free, at the following quotations for sound lots. Extra baker's in bbls at $8 50, do in bf sks at $8@8 25. CARD.

DR. DARLOW J. SMITH'S WATER CURE AND Phrenological Institute, 627 Sacramento Street, San Francisco. This is the only Regular Water Cure in Francisco, where all curable diseases are treated without drugs. Dr. Smith was the first to establish a water cure on this coast, based upon the theory and practice of the New York Hydropathic College.

We have a truly healthful boarding place for men, women and children, and our prices are moderate.

The Phrenological organs plainly indicate the diseases to which any person, male or female, is predisposed.

Put this card in your hat, and when you come to San Francisco, call on Dr. Smith. He will give you consultation and a phrenological examination in regard to health. It will cost you nothing and may save you months and years of ill health and "bad luck."

Dr. Smith gives free lectures to gentlemen every Friday evening, on subjects pertaining to health, at his Phrenological Hall, 627 Sacramento Street.
